Dan Heath is an Associate in Selman Breitman's Seattle office practicing within the firm's Insurance, Toxic Tort/Environmental, General Liability, and Commercial Litigation, practice groups. He represents insurance companies in insurance coverage disputes, including representing parties in disputes that involve complex liability issues, and represents asbestos clients in depositions and litigation.

Dan has represented his clients in litigation at both the state and federal level on a variety of legal issues and is experienced at conducting depositions, negotiating with opposing counsel, conducting legal research, and writing motions and memoranda. He has also represented his clients at a number of arbitration hearings and has written, argued, and won motions at state superior and federal district courts.

In the years prior to joining Selman Breitman, Dan worked as a Rule 9 Extern at the Thurston County Prosecutor's Office – Misdemeanor Division and a Legal Extern at the Washington State Attorney General's Office – University of Washington Division.

Originally from Palo Alto, California, Dan presently resides in Seattle, Washington with his wife. When not helping clients with their legal needs he spends his time exploring the vast beauty of the Pacific Northwest.
